Course Contract for SPAN 313 Online (Summer II, 2009)

READ AND PLACE A CHECK MARK AT THE FRONT OF EACH STATEMENT

___ The homepage of SPAN313 is <http://blog.cofc.edu/span313>. It is the student's responsibility to visit the site before the start of the semester and during the first day of class. Otherwise, he/she will fall behind. If the homepage is not available or does not contain the information the student is seeking, he/she should contact the professor. The professor shall not accommodate students who do not exercise due diligence in remaining informed about the course.

___ This class will have weekly compositions, assignments and Homework to be sent to the professor via email. It is the student's responsibility to log on to follow course instructions on the course homepage during the first day of classes to familiarize himself or herself with the system.

___ Online courses require more self-discipline and motivation than classes that meet in person. Students who are primarily seeking entry into this class because they believe it will be easier than a regular class should readjust their expectations.

___ Policy on technical difficulties: if a student cannot access course materials properly on their home computer, they should use CofC computer facilities.

___ Email announcements to the class will be sent to each student's CofC Edisto email account. It is the responsibility of students to check that account on a regular basis. The professor cannot honor non-CofC email addresses for communication for this class.

___ Due to the contents of the course and its on line format, it is prohibited the use of online translator. Any suspicion of this type of behavior will deserve automatically an F in the entire course and the student will be remitted to the Honor Board of the College of Charleston.

By returning this document to me via your Edisto email accounts you acknowledge that you have read and initialed the above statement. Please take an unsigned copy for your records.
